Veranda

This is where it all begins

Inspired by the romance of the South, Veranda is a fresh take on comfortable small town living where life's greatest moments are shared with friends and neighbors on a welcoming front porch.

A project of Johnson Development Corp. — known for innovative and environmentally sensitive master planning — Veranda offers homes by Houston's leading homebuilders.

Residents live just minutes away from major employers and world-class shopping, dining, and entertainment. Antique in historic Richmond. Attend a concert at the Smart Financial Centre in Sugar Land. Or enjoy an unforgettable night on the town in Houston — the nation's fourth-largest city.

WELCOME to VERANDA

We invite you to take a stroll through Veranda, our new one-of-a-kind community where the historic past and the vibrant present meet, creating a connection that will last well into the future.

Chat with friendly neighbors over a glass of lemonade while your children play on the front lawn. Enjoy nature as you bike or meander on our trails, or immerse yourself in the past as you play in historic downtown Richmond or Sugar Land.

That's why we've crafted amenities designed to bring your family and your neighbors closer, building a community you will love coming home to.

Celebrating the Past, BUILDING THE FUTURE

Veranda is a reflection of the rich heritage of Richmond and Fort Bend County. Founded by Stephen F. Austin, Fort Bend took its name from a log fort built in a bend of the Brazos River. When the area was established as Fort Bend County by the Republic of Texas in 1837, Richmond was born.

The town's early residents included some of the best-known Texans of the period, from Erastus (Deaf) Smith to the "Mother of Texas," Jane Long. Long opened a boarding house in downtown Richmond in 1837 and named it The Veranda Hotel. It was this hotel and its wide, covered porch that inspired the name of Fort Bend's newest master-planned community.
